

English Reading

Horses' Holiday

Author Amy Lin
Class 2 Grade 5

CONTENTS

- 1 About the book
- 2 Interesting parts
- 3 Continue
- 4 Illustration

01

About the book

This is a book talk about the horses' holiday. The author of the book is Kaye Umansky. The horses come from Horsey-lulu Land and Paddock-on-the-Hay. Everyone looks different. Some are black, some are brown, some are white, some are grey and so on. They go to the Dobbin World. This lady horse' tail is tied up in a very pretty way. This teenager horse wears a sun hat. They are doing different things. Some lounge by the poolside with drinks upon a tray. Some set off on picnics hampers stuffed with hay. Some are water skiing. The babies splash in rock pools and play. Their mums sit round on beach mats and neigh. The old ones stroll along the pier and dream of yesterday. The little ones are lining up to pay the ice cream. A horse writes some postcards for his relatives. In the evening, they have a horse DJ. At night, there are fireworks, a dazzling display. But nothing lasts for ever, the holiday is over, they need to come back. They hug and kiss each other. They have a happy holiday. However, they are looking forward to coming here next time. This is all the main content of the book.

02

Interesting parts

Some are black and some are brown, and some are dapple grey.

This one's tail is tied up in a very pretty way.

This one wears a sun hat which he bought on Saturday.

Some lounge by the poolside with drinks upon a tray.

Some set off on picnics with hampers stuffed with hay.

The braver ones hire water skis and zoom around the bay.

Splashing all the lilos and making lots of spray.

The babies splash in rock pools and play and play.

Their mums sit round on beach mats, and neigh and neigh.

The old ones stroll along the pier and dream of yesterday.

The little ones want ice-creams and are lining up to pay.

The old ones stroll along the pier and dream of yesterday.

The little ones want ice-creams, and are lining up to pay.

The old ones stroll along the pier and dream of yesterday.
The little ones want ice-creams, and are lining up to pay.

This one writes some postcards to his nice old Aunty May,
And his granny and his grandpa, and his little cousin Kay.

Each evening on the campsite, they have a horse DJ.
He is the very best around (At least, that's what they say.)
He wants them up and dancing, and they're longing to obey!

At midnight, there are fireworks, a dazzling display.
But nothing lasts for ever. The time has ticked away.
The holiday is over, to everyone's dismay.

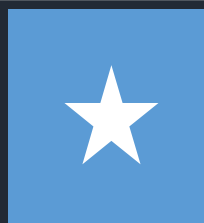

03

Continue

It was the horse' holiday again. This time was in winter. They came by car. They came by bus. They came by plane. They came by train. This one's wear a grey hat. This one's was a brown coat. The babies were throwing the snow ball to hit each other. Their fathers were watching the ice hockey race and ice dancing race. Their mothers went to the ice house which everything was made of ice. At midday., it was warm. They went to the "horse' restaurant". Adults horses ate seafood together. The old horses drank tea and eat dim sum. Children were happy. They had a buffet lunch together and sang karaoke. In the afternoon, all the horses climbed mountains. They enjoyed the sunset, too. In the evening, the children went to "ICE CHIRDREN PARK". They played ice slides, ice sleds, ice bicycles and so on. Girls made snowman, boys road ice motorcycles. They played ice adventures, too. Adults watched the "Fashion Show" and "Art Show ". They enjoyed the show. At last, all the horses went to circus to have fun. What a wonderful winter holiday. Will they all come back next year? "You bet we will!" They say.

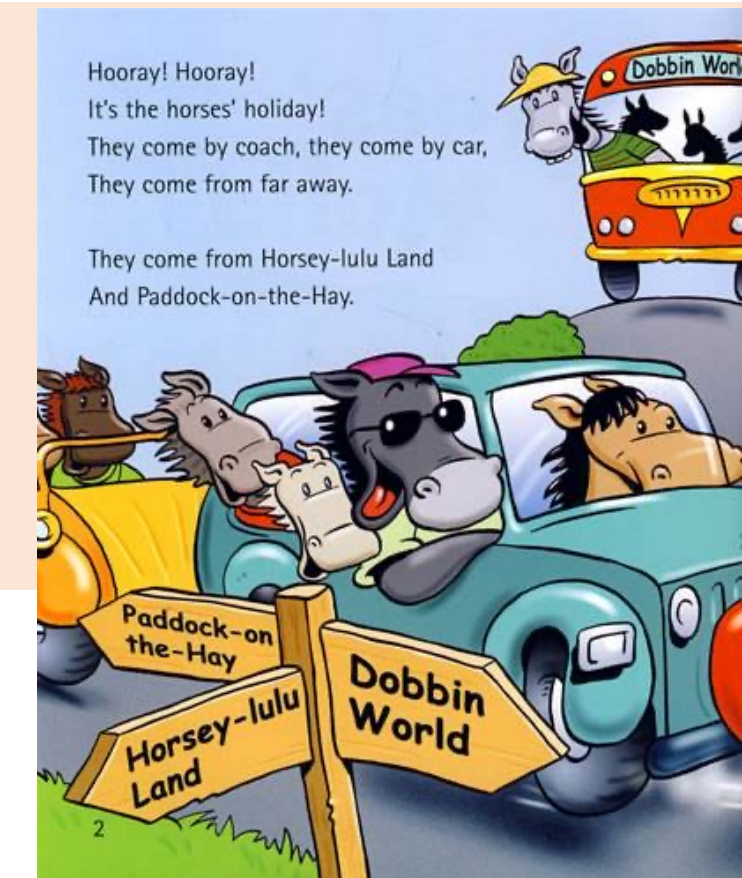

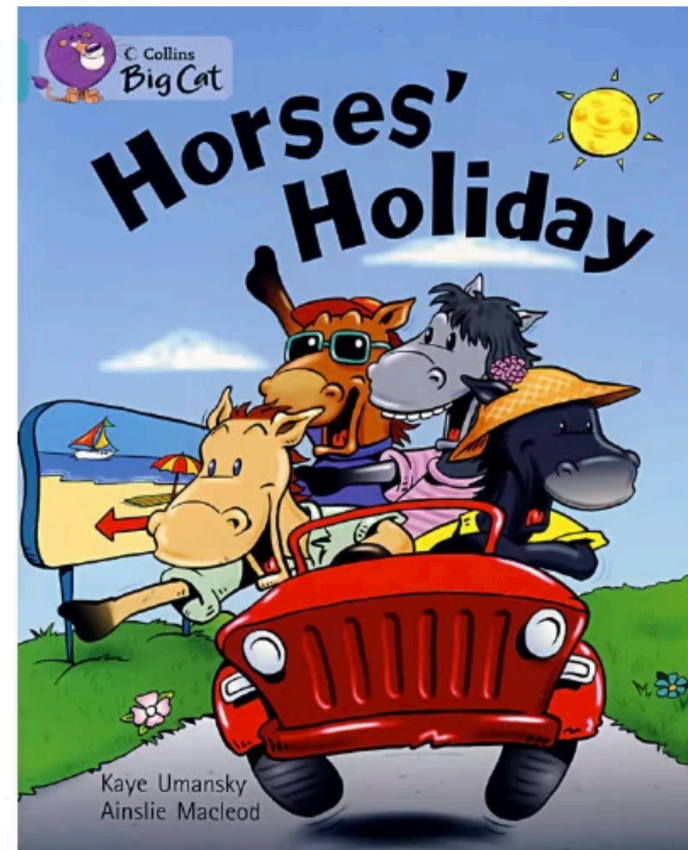

04

Illustration

Illustrations of the book

Thank you!

December 20, 2020

