This story is about a crazy escape-to-tropical-paradise family vacation which happened in the family's winter holiday. Greg Heffley was really looking forward to another usual Christmas until his family saw the advertisement of the place his dad and mom spent their honeymoon — a tropical island resort Isla De Corales. So his parents decided to escape the cold weather and the stress of the approaching holiday season and go there instead. But trouble began right when the Heffleys were on their way to the airport. Traffic chaos both outdoors and indoors (airport), plane problems, horrible animal threatening, food sickness, sun poisoning, tennis ball bullies and a big security guard situation nearly ruined the family's vacation. On the day they were going to leave for home, Greg's mom and dad surprised the rest of the family with a plan — sneak back into the resort for the day. Just when the Heffleys were having fun, their "enemy" family reported them to the security again so they had to flee and their vacation ended in disaster.

Interesting Parts

Sunday

It's been a few days since we made it back home, and Mom's already working on the photo album. And from the pictures, you'd think we had a great time.

But any chance of us ever going BACK to the resort is completely gone. I went on the website to show Rowley where I spent my Christmas vacation, and there was a big picture of my family on the home page.

I couldn't read the words that went with it, but I'm pretty sure I got the general idea.

My Comments

Greg Heffley and his amusing family strikes again! This time they went to a resort for Christmas. The Heffleys were longing for a nice vacation that belonged to themselves, even when they were already “caught” by the security guards and were forced to go back home at the end. But Greg’s family (including Greg) were stuck with too many troubles and didn’t really care about or solve them, so their holiday ended in a mess.

The humorous story makes every person who had read it laugh but it also lets us realize the importance of a family’s unity. As a family, we should know more about each other, learn to tolerate and listen to others. Think before you move. Cool down when you meet a problem too.

THANKS FOR WATCHING!
